

THE OCALA EVENING STAR

Volume IV.

OCALA, FLORIDA, TUESDAY, MAY 23, 1899

Number 281

Will M. Wallace

This gentleman, not so many years ago, was a resident of Ocala. Everybody knew him, as he was "one of the boys." His mother, Mrs. Nancy Wallace, still resides here. Five or six years ago Will went to Savannah, got work in the railroad shops, got married, and is still employed in the shops.

Several weeks ago Will assaulted an old man by the name of Carroll and beat him severely, because, as Wallace says, Carroll had outrageously abused and insulted Mrs. Wallace. Carroll deemed this untrue.

The recorder of the city heard the case and bound Wallace over on the charge of assault with intent to kill and also fined him $100 for disturbing the peace.

Wallace's attorneys were greatly dissatisfied with the result of the trial, especially the fine, so they induced the mayor to re-try the case. The recorder objected, but Mayor Myers heard the case Saturday and reduced the fine to $20.

The case has probably caused more talk and newspaper notoriety than any similar case ever brought before the city of Savannah, because the papers asserted that politics was at the bottom of it in the late municipal election, in which Wallace was a red hot Myers' man and Carroll was equally as ardent for Myers' opponent for the mayoralty, McDonald.
